1. Claim 2 is objected to because of the following informalities: the term "using" does not seem to belong in its context (in line 9 after "tuner"). Appropriate correction is required.

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless -

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

Claims 2 and 3 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Sih et al.

The receiver of Sih (noting particularly Figs. 2 and 3) includes a front end tuner 204 controlled by VCO 206 at a reception frequency, which tuner that passes a video signal containing a pilot signal originating from antenna 202, wherein an IF signal from element 208 in turn filters the signal to provide a signal still containing the pilot to be demodulated by element 212. A memory is used to store frequency error data of the oscillator (e.g. col. 9 line 59 – col. 10 line 19), and a control unit 224 controls the frequency of the signal output from the oscillator based on the stored error information. A frequency deviation measuring unit is encompassed by element 210.

Because only in the preambles is there recited an intended use involving high-definition television, such is not given significant weight in considering the scope of the claim (Catalina, 62 USOQ2d at 1785), thereby meeting claims 2 and 3.

1. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. All of the additionally cited references disclose in some manner adjusting the frequency of a signal by detecting the pilot carrier in an IF band, storing detected frequency deviations, and providing offset data to counter the deviations. Television is also covered.

- 2. Claims 1, 4 and 5 appear allowable over the prior art.
